↑ You may have noticed already, but the comic's reduction is to be changed recently. Some parents have complained that the lettering was too small for children to properly read, so entire pages had to be forcibly enlarged. Because of that, I had to find ways to prevent the margins on the left and right edges on the page from being cut out. Sometimes this involved some unusual procedures (shrinking panels, widening the gaps between columns). ... Talk about a real pain in the neck...
